

Offerings are established and maintained to meet the changing needs of the community and complement the credit and noncredit offerings of the college. Classes, workshops, excursions, et cetera are designed for both minors and adults.

Education assignments do not count toward credit or Contract Education instructors are paid in the same manner, unless delivered as either credit or noncredit; in that case, the instructors are on the appropriate salary schedule and the assignment is calculated as follows.

The revenues received from the state are not used to subsidize Community Education or Contract Education programs. Enrollment fees for individuals and training fees are based on labor-market research and actual costs for activity or training. Every effort is made to recover the actual costs of programs, including administrative costs, through public or private contributions, donations, or user fees. The college recognizes the value of Community Education and Contract Education to the overall public relations of the college.
