we're moving in a positive direction. The college will continue to monitor these leading indicators for subsequent cohorts to be sure that the upward trend continues.

Tarman noted that progress was being made in all categories each year prior to the pandemic. Guided Pathways efforts are continuing with a focus on students obtaining education plans in their first semester, and we are seeing positive results from these efforts.

Tarman reviewed AB705 data as compared to the statewide data, specifically transfer-level English and math, which now have no barriers for enrollment.   Data shows many more students are taking these courses, and they are also performing in these courses courses (e.g., course success rates have remained relatively flat, even though many more students now have access to the transfer-level course). This is outstanding because far more students are now completing transfer-level courses with a passing grade, thus completing that important degree and transfer requirement. Our numbers are 11 percent high
