

REFLECTIONS * 8 , ' (

Most service learning instructors require that students complete some type of reflective writing assignment. This can include journal entries, field notes, blog postings and reflection essays. While some students enjoy the writing process, others struggle and are unsure where to begin. If your instructor has not provided specific guidelines, start by answering the following questions: _____ and responsibilities?

Evaluation

- What did you learn about yourself and the organization through this experience?
- Did you feel that your service made a difference? If so, in what ways?
- If you were in charge of the organization, how would you make improvements?
- What types of skills did you acquire or improve?
- Did you receive any compliments criticisms R U I H H G E D I F F I C U L T ?
- What was the most difficult/satisfying part of your service?
- What did you find interesting or challenging?
- What did you discover about yourself in this new way of learning and serving your community?

Integration

- Has this